All employees are expected to meet generally accepted standards of performance and behavior. There are occasions, however, when even after counseling, discussion, and opportunities to improve, employees cannot or choose not to meet the required level of performance standards.

The formal processes to address performance problems focus on identifying and correcting employee performance. Supervisors work with employees to:

- specify expectations for good performance;
- provide the employee with the opportunity to correct work performance which does not meet those standards or

- expectations;
- identify violations, including imposing appropriate discipline;
- address performance problems.

Poor Performance Unsatisfactory work performance can encompass a variety of behaviors which include, but are not limited to, failure to complete work assignments or correct errors in a reasonable amount of time, inability or unwillingness to learn new tasks or skills, or to work collaboratively. As soon as such patterns are identified, the supervisor communicates with the employee to take corrective action, which may include coaching for improved performance. If the employee does not meet the standards of performance, a supervisor may establish a formal period of evaluation during which time the employee can correct performance.

At the end of the formal period of evaluation, the supervisor will determine if the employee meets the established standards of performance. If the employee meets the standards, employment will continue. If, however, the supervisor determines that the employee does not perform to meet the standards, employment will be terminated.

Failure to comply with University policy (misconduct/cause)

There are normally six steps to the discipline process. However, in cases of serious misconduct the supervisor may move directly to a later step in the process, including termination.

1) Oral warning: An oral warning is given for minor first offenses and remains in effect for 18 months.

2) Written reprimand: A written reprimand addresses a subsequent offence by the employee.

3) Cutting of the monthly wage: cutting of the monthly wage from 1/8 to 1/30 of the monthly gross wage.

4) Removal from the leading position: The removal from the leading position of Rector, Dean, Director, Head of Department.

5) Suspension or final warning: A suspension or final warning indicates the seriousness of the infraction and is intended to alert the employee that the next step is termination. The employee is notified in writing of the suspension as soon as possible after the incident. The length of the suspension is based on the seriousness of the misconduct and normally is without pay. If an investigation is necessary, the employee may be placed on leave with pay, pending results of the investigation.

6) Termination: Termination of employment is the final step in the discipline process or the penalty for very serious offenses.

Fairness Review Process “Bedër” University College is committed to providing its staff members with an equitable and respectful work environment. On occasion, an employee may feel that a manager has taken an employment action against the employee in violation of University policy. When this circumstance occurs, the employee should seek resolution informally through the department management, including use of dispute resolution resources such as the Office of Human Resources. If the management action is one of those listed below and informal discussions do not resolve the dispute, it is the University’s policy to provide a fair, timely, and efficient formal review which will settle the matter.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Employees of “Bedër” University College should avoid activities or situations which may result in a conflict of interest or the appearance of conflict. Staff members must not use their University positions to influence outside organizations or individuals for the direct financial, personal or professional benefit of themselves, should they be family members, or others with whom there is a personal relationship. An employee may decide to participate in some outside activity or business because it provides financial or personal gain. In those instances the employee’s first obligation is to the University, and the employee must avoid any situation where either the extent or the type of activity could, either direct or by appearance, limit the employee’s impartiality or effectiveness in fulfilling his or her job responsibilities. Employees should be sensitive to any situation where there is the potential for a conflict of interest or the appearance of conflict. Judgments on whether a conflict exists can be difficult to make and staffs who are uncertain should consult their supervisors or the Office of Human Resources.

The potential for a conflict of interest exists across a wide range of activities. The following specific policies provide guidance for avoiding conflict of interest.

NEPOTISM AND PERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS IN THE WORKPLACE

“Bedër” University College permits the employment within the college community of individuals of the same family and those who have a personal relationship. However, the employment within the same department normally is prohibited for individuals of the same family or those who have a personal relationship. Additional to avoid a conflict of interest or an appearance of conflict of interest, no employee may initiate or participate in, directly or indirectly, decisions involving a direct benefit, e.g., initial employment or rehire, promotion, salary, performance appraisals, work assignments or other working conditions to those related by blood or marriage, membership in the same household, including domestic partners, or persons with whom employees have an intimate relationship.

The potential for conflict of interest may also exist in close personal relationships which involve other than family relationships. The University views such conflicts of interest as serious as it does view those involving family members or blood relatives.

USE OF UNIVERSITY RESOURCES

University services, resources, and property, including the University name, are to be used by employees only for University business. There may be occasions when the respective superior can permit limited use providing there has been prior approval. The following is a representative list of University resources:

- staff and staff time
- telephones and fax machines
- duplicating services
- campus mail
- computing equipment and time
- office space
- supplies
- other equipment

The University name and seal are for official University business only. Use of either requires authorized permission.

GIFTS AND GRATUITIES

In order to avoid a conflict of interest or the appearance of a conflict of interest, at no time should an employee solicit or accept gifts from current or potential vendors, contractors or their agents, local businesses, University departments, or others with whom there is a potential or ongoing business or Professional relationship. Employees may accept ordinary business courtesies, such as payment for a modest meal or event, or gifts which are promotional items without significant value and which are distributed routine. If the value of the gift is undetermined, it should be returned. Gratuities or gifts of money to the employee cannot be accepted at any time and should be returned immediately to the donor.

PURCHASING AND CONTRACTS

University employees must not execute purchasing agreements or negotiate contracts and/or subcontracts where there may be a conflict of interest or an appearance of a conflict of interest. Employees should refrain from these activities with any organization in which:

employees or persons related by blood, marriage, members of the same household, including domestic partners or persons with whom employees have a personal relationship, have a significant financial interest (defined in this specific instance as greater than 1% of the stock, profits or assets of an organization or company, other than “Bedër” University College, and/ or employees or persons related by blood, marriage, members of the same household, including domestic partners or persons with whom employee have a personal relationship, have current or pending employment, consulting, management, fiduciary or similar affiliation.

Not adhering to this policy is considered a serious matter and may result in disciplinary action, up to and including the termination of employment.

INSTITUTIONAL COMPLIANCE

Faculty, staff, and students who work on behalf of the University assume responsibility for conducting their operations within the law and keep in accordance with “Bedër” University College highest ethical standards. All members of the University community who are employed by the University, who act on behalf of the University, or who work on campus are expected to conduct their operations in accordance with the general principles of conduct in the specific regulations and other published policy.

If you have concerns of any kind stemming from possible noncompliance with government or external agency regulations, related University policies, and errors or irregularities in “Bedër”’s financial accounting practices or policies, you can report them. Raising such concerns is a service to the University and will not jeopardize your employment.

If you have information about unethical behavior, criminal activity, or any other work-related concern, you should speak with your supervisor or an employee in the University office that has oversight authority for the policy or law.

ACADEMIC MATTERS

ROLE OF THE FACULTY MEMBER

The role of individual faculty members in supporting the mission of the University will depend on the specific missions of their departments or research centers. All faculty members, however, have certain common responsibilities: to commit themselves fully to their teaching obligations, to participate in the development of the programs of their departments and research centers and of the University as a whole, to engage in scholarly activities, and, as appropriate, to support the University in its goal to render public service.

As scholars and citizens of the University community, all parties must be ever cognizant of the axiom that every increment of authority and discretion brings with it corollary responsibilities to their fellow faculty members, to students, to the University, and to the community and society at large.

FACULTY DEVELOPMENT AND EVALUATION

The professional competence and intellectual vigor of its faculty are the most important measures of a university's quality. In recognition of that fact, "Bedër" University College supports the individual development of its faculty members by encouraging and rewarding academic achievement in teaching, scholarship, and all other facets of a faculty member's professional life. The University also encourages and promotes the participation in national and international conferences. Faculty development is the responsibility of the Head of Department, Dean, and the Rector's Office (Human Resources Office), as well as of the individual faculty member.

Because the development of an academic career is a highly individual matter in terms of the direction and level of one's aspirations and the rate of their pursuit, the University attempts to create a generally supportive atmosphere. A variety of specific programs are sponsored that are designed to help faculty members with their teaching and with their overall professional growth.

The University's faculty development policies serve to:

- recruit new faculty members who add specific needed strengths to our faculty and who are dedicated to excellence, both in their scholarly pursuits and in their teaching;
- aid and encourage newer faculty members by helping them to understand the University's and colleagues' expectations, and the criteria and standards for advancement;
- encourage the individual departments to codify their criteria for evaluating their faculties, and to make these criteria and standards accessible to the faculty members;
- Aid in harmonizing faculty members' personal career goals with departmental and University objectives, and to give due recognition to faculty members for contributions toward the realization of these objectives;
- encourage faculty members to strive consciously to improve their teaching, their professional service, and their stature in their scholarly fields; and
- recognize and reward high attainment by faculty members in any or all of these areas.

The maintenance of high-quality faculty is the keystone of faculty development. In evaluating faculty performance, the Head of Departments, together with the Deans, in consultation with their senior faculties, examine a number of factors. Primary among them is evidence of intellectual vitality in scholarship and a high degree of effectiveness in teaching. Secondary, the scientific research carried out by the faculty member. In the evaluation process, it is the responsibility of the Head of Departments, Deans, and senior faculty to:

- review the faculty member's progress at least annually and discuss with the faculty member his or her strengths and weaknesses in teaching, including advising, in scholarly activity, in public and professional service, and in furthering the department's or school's other objectives;
- interpret the University's standards and procedures in terms of departmental or school objectives, and explain these interpretations and objectives to the faculty member;
- assist the faculty member in formulating plans for his or her

- progress toward mutually desirable professional objectives;
- provide encouragement and advice concerning the resources needed for the pursuit of these objectives; and
- provide recognition for progress and quality in performance in these areas by means of appropriate recommendations and in other tangible ways.

Public service (including community service as relevant) and professional service is included in the evaluation process for promotion and tenure. The weight given to these activities varies with academic discipline and it shall be defined clearly by each Faculty. It is generally agreed that public service is an activity based on a faculty member's professional expertise; it is conducted outside the University; it makes a substantial public contribution; and remuneration is not a primary consideration or motivation for the activity. Ideally, this work could be incorporated into the faculty member's professional research and/or the teaching and training of students. The results may become disseminated through publication as a more permanent record. The faculty member himself or herself is expected to provide data for the evaluative process by periodically supplying the head of departments, dean, or the Rector's Office (Human Resources Office) with materials to go into a dossier on his or her teaching, scholarly accomplishment, and public service.

The Head of Departments, Deans, and Rector's Office (Human Resources Office) also examine a number of additional factors. Among them are: leadership ability, the quality of the individual's goals and their importance to departmental development, and evidence of progress in relation to these goals and other obligations.

The Deans and the Rector's Office (Human Resources Office) periodically consult with Head of Departments on faculty advancement. Deans and Head of Departments are also responsible for identifying persons who meet the criteria for permanent faculty, who are capable of further development, or who are of lesser promise to their departments.

The Departments and the Deans should submit by the end of each academic year the report concerning academic performance and advancement of the concerned faculty.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY AND OBLIGATIONS

It is the direct responsibility of academic staff to encourage free inquiry and expression and to provide an academic environment in their classrooms and in their contact with students that reflects a high standard of integrity and is conducive to learning.

With regard to obligations relating to academic integrity, faculty members are expected to conduct themselves in a professional manner, as summarized below:

- To meet their classes when scheduled.
- To be available at reasonable times for appointments with students, and to keep such appointments.
- To make appropriate preparation for classes and other meetings.
- To perform their grading duties and other academic evaluations in a timely manner.
- To describe to students, within the period in which a student may add or drop a course, orally, in writing, or by reference to printed course descriptions, the general content and objectives of a course; and announce the methods and standards of evaluation, including the importance to be assigned various factors in academic evaluations and, in advance of any evaluation, the permissible materials or references allowed during evaluation.
- To base all academic evaluations upon good-faith professional judgment.
- Not to consider, in academic evaluation, such factors as race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, political or cultural affiliation, lifestyle, activities, or behavior outside the classroom unrelated to academic achievement.
- To respect the confidentiality of information regarding a student contained in University records; and to refrain from releasing such information, except in connection with in their University business, or with student consent, or as may be permitted by law.
- Not to exploit their professional relationship with students for private advantage; and to refrain from soliciting the assistance of students for private purposes in a manner that infringes upon such students' freedom of choice.

- To give appropriate recognition to contributions made by students to research, publication, service, or other activities.
- To refrain from any activity which involves risk to the health and safety of a student, except with the student's informed consent, and, where applicable, in accordance with the University policy relating to the use of human subjects in experimentation.
- To respect the dignity of students individually and collectively in the classroom and other academic contexts.

COURSE FILE

Course files, which are prepared by the respective instructor and stored by the Department, represent an important element of “Bedër” study programs. Information on the conduct of the course during the semester, on the topics covered and on the student performance evaluation should be included in a systematic way in the course file. The preparation of the course files and their storage by the Departments is an indispensable element for the work to be carried out in the framework of the international accreditation of the study programs offered by the institution (such as ABET etc) as well as in order to ensure a sustainable quality in the teaching process.

The respective Head of Department is responsible for the preparation and storage of all files of the courses offered by the Department, whereas the Dean is responsible for the course files of all departments of the respective Faculty. The course files may be prepared electronically in the website. In such a case, a printout may be taken at the end of semester and will be archived as a file. The Rector’s Office will not carry out any financial transaction for the instructors of the courses that do not have their respective course file.

The documents to be included in the course file are listed below:

FACULTY-STUDENT RELATIONSHIPS

The University's educational mission is promoted by professional relationships between faculty members and students. Relationships of an intimate nature compromise the integrity of a faculty-student relationship whenever the faculty member has a professional responsibility for the student. The University prohibits intimate relationships between a faculty member and a student whose academic work, teaching, or research is being supervised or evaluated by the faculty member. "Faculty member" refers to anyone appointed by the University as a lecturer, researcher, or academic administrator, including graduate and undergraduate students so appointed; "intimate" may also be defined as romantic.

If an intimate relationship should exist or develop between a faculty member and a student, the faculty member shall be object to disciplinary action.

ACCESS TO STUDENTS' EDUCATIONAL RECORDS

Students and, in limited cases, their parents have the right to inspect and review the student's educational record; exercise a limited control over the disclosure of information contained in the student's educational record; seek to correct a student's educational record and report violations, which provides the minimum standards for the management of student educational records. The University designates some personally identifiable information contained in a student's educational record as "Directory Information" in order that the University may, unless the student has expressly objected, disclose the information without a student's further prior written consent. Access to a student's educational record by a third party for legitimate educational purposes or release by University officials is permitted under certain circumstances.

STUDENT CONDUCT AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURES

The University Student Discipline Regulation serves to ensure both the rights and responsibilities of students through the operation of a system of regulations and hearing bodies. The said Regulation delineates non-academic standards of conduct appropriate to the University in consonance with its educational goals. The Discipline Regulation applies to all undergraduate, graduate, and professional students registered at the “Bedër” University College. In some cases, off-campus conduct may also be subject to disciplinary action by the University. To deal with violations of the Discipline Regulation, the Discipline Board has been established.

STUDENT ABSENCES

Each student must attend the courses, applied studies, laboratories, projects, seminars, workshops, graduation projects and other studies of the semester she/he enrolled for. Bachelor Students who have not attended at least 70% of theoretical courses are not allowed to take final exam of those courses.

Students who do not meet these standards are obligated to retake the course with all the relevant obligations.

The posting of office hours on the office door is the responsibility of the faculty member as a courtesy and convenience to students.

If in one subject, the student is evaluated by (D- and F), then he is not passing and is forced to repeat that subject. In case that the overall average of grades is at least (2:00) and has no grade (D- and F), the student is considered successful.

b) In case that at the end of the fourth semester, the overall average of student's grades is lower than 1.80, then he gets probationary status and is given the right to enter up to three additional exams before starting the fifth semester. A student who is on probationary status must repeat courses that were open previous semester, in which he has taken F, D, D, D +, C- grades. In order that a student can have the right to take new courses opened in fifth semester, he must pass the probationary status and reach or exceed the level of (1.80) of the overall average; otherwise it is not allowed to take subjects from above.

c) If at the end of the semester, students have successfully completed all courses and have an average rank of semester from 3:00 to 3:49 they are in the list of "Honor", while those who have an average of 3:50 to 4:00, are in the list of "High Honor".

Second cycle programs:

b) In the case that a student has a grade lower than C (C-, D +, D, D- and F), it is not passing and is forced to repeat the course.

c) In the case that the overall average of grades is at least B- (2.66) and has no grade C-, D +, D, D- and F, the student is considered successful.

d) In case that the overall average of grades is less than B- (2.66), the student gets probationary status. A student, who is on probationary status, has to repeat courses in which has been unsuccessful in previous semesters. In this case, the student should not take any C-, D +, D, D- and F grade.
